December 22, 1926.

Mr. Hillyer Ryder,
Carmel, New York.

Dear Mr. Ryder:

I am enclosing in this letter what seems to me to be a new variety of the 1787 Massachusetts Cent. The obverse seems to be that of Crosby's 4 D and the reverse that of C. Would you mind letting me know what is the proper attribution of this piece?

For the Christmas Holidays and perhaps for two weeks altogether I expect to remain in New York and would like to have you address me in care of Gutttag Brothers.

Thanking you in advance for your courtesy and wishing for you all the best of the Holiday Season, I remain

Sincerely yours,

E. H. Adams.

INTRODUCTION

While Mr. Guttag has endeavored to bring together every available specimen of the Latin American series, still it has been his especial aim to show the first designs of the issues of the New World for Santo Domingo, Mexico, and Peru. That there was a distinct series of coins struck for Santo Domingo has not been ascertained definitely, but we think that the list of pieces shown under the heading of "Santo Domingo" have probably all been issued in or for that country. At any rate, they cannot reasonably be attributed to any other country of the New World. In order to give <sup>the series</sup> as complete as possible we have illustrated all of the pieces of this character which are contained in other collections, chiefly that of Senor Manuel Vidal Quadras y Ramon of Spain.

The first varieties of coins issued for Mexico, as listed here, are very likely those of similar design to the three reales piece, which undoubtedly was one of the very first denominations to be struck for that country, and which was shortly thereafter discontinued owing to the fact that it was confused with the two reales. There is on record a full series of denominations bearing the distinctive marks of the three reales, except the eight reales, and up to this time no specimen of that denomination has been reported, notwithstanding that early employees of the mint have stated that such a piece was struck.

In the Peruvian series, which followed that of Mexico in seniority there is little doubt that the eight reales and the quarter real, Nos. 3993 and 3994, were the first coins issued, as they conform closely in design to the law of Philip II., which provided that the devices should be those used by his father, Charles V., and which are the only coins of Peru which show this design. In various collections have been shown the other denominations of this series--namely, four, two, one, and one-half reales.

Another aim of Mr. Guttag has been to show so far as the coins themselves can do just what was the period in which the "cob" pieces were struck. According to a contract between PHILIP II. and Dr. Vellerino, of August 9, 1598, a plan was provided to make coins by cutting off the end of silver bars, of the proper size and weight, and then <sup>stamping</sup> striking them with the royal arms. This gave rise to the issue of "cob" pieces which had such a general circulation throughout the entire area of South and Central America, Mexico, and neighboring countries. This species of currency was known under various names, such as "cabo de Barra," "macuquina," and Although this method of striking coins had been provided for as early as 1598, it seems that it was not put into practice until many years later. It is uncertain when the first pieces were struck, but apparently it was not until about 1652. The first pieces for Peru and Mexico were made about this time, judging by the dates of known specimens, although they may have been made earlier. There is also uncertainty about the time this style of coinage was discontinued. Mexico apparently issued them for but a short period, the earliest "cob" piece in Mr. Guttag's collection being dated 1652 and the latest 1662. The first issue for Peru, as shown in the collection, was dated 1652, and the latest 1772, and this notwithstanding that laws had expressly stated that only circular coins should be struck at the Spanish mints.
